

The incident involving MNF is being blown out of proportion. The bare back of a woman and the implications of the scene are in no way detrimental to the welfare of society. One of the greatest shortcomings of American society seems to be the attitude toward sexual behavior. When I was in high school, we didn't have sexual education until senior year because of the attitudes that seem to be prevailing today. That very same year in high school, two middle school girls became pregnant (sixth grade and eighth grade). Maybe it's time we lightened up and spoke about sex.
